“Hope is at The Heart of Christmas” – Isaiah 9:2-7

The prophet Isaiah writes one of the most classic of all Old Testament prophecies about the coming birth of Christ. The passage he writes is born of gloom and darkness. The world had felt the full weight of sin, and it had wreaked havoc on all of creation. What Isaiah offered in chapter nine was something the Jewish people needed more than anything—hope. Hope that one day someone would come to make all things right and restore what had been broken. The birth of Jesus was the fulfillment of that hope, and this fact offers us hope for today.

The presence of darkness _____ our hope.

Hope is about a _____.

Hope is about a _____.

Hope is about God’s _____ with us.

Hope is about being encouraged to _____ for the Kingdom.

God’s faithfulness from the past gives us hope for the present and the future.
